Useful SEND Websites

The following organisations can provide further information and support.

Please note that we are not responsible for the content of external websites.

Communication and Interaction

- Afasic - a charity that supports and provides information for families with children and young adults who have speech, language and communication needs (SLCN) with a focus of developmental language disorder (DLD)

- National Autistic Society – a charity that provides in-depth advice and guidance on the challenges autistic people and their families face

- Autistic Girls Network – charity that supports the well-being of neurodivergent girls, women and non-binary people

- I Can – charity that gives children and young people support to develop speech, language and communication skills

- Tourette's Action – charity working to improve the lives of people living with Tourette's Syndrome.

Cognition and Learning

- The British Dyslexia Association - charity that promotes early identification of specific learning difficulties (SpLD) including dyslexia and dyscalculia, and provides further information.

- Learning Disabilities - outlined on the NHS website

Physical and Sensory

- British Deaf Association – a national Deaf-led charity that works directly with Deaf people that use British Sign Language (BSL)

- Royal National Institute for the Blind – a charity that works directly with people with a visual impairment

- Dyspraxia – outlined on the NHS website

Social, Emotional and Mental Health

ADHD UK - a charity by people with ADHD, for people with ADHD

Childline – a help and advice charity that provides a counselling service for children and young people. It is free of charge and confidential. A multilingual service is provided

Young Minds – a mental health charity for children, young people and their parents.

Samaritans – a charity providing support for those with feelings of despair or distress and are struggling to cope or are at risk of suicide

BEAT Eating disorders – a charity that provides support for people and families affected by eating disorders.